My Fur Lady Opens Igloo Today

Tickets for the forthcoming production of My Fur Lady will be on sale today in the Union from 12-2, the Arts Building from 11-2, and the Engineering Building from 12-2. The Red and White Revue's presentation will run from Feb. 7th to 13th.

English Department Features Shaw Plays

Rights have now been obtained by the English Department to produce two plays by George Bernard Shaw, "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets", and "The Man of Destiny". This 'double bill' will be directed by Griffith Brewer, well known Montreal actor, who is teaching drama at McGill this year.

"The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" furnishes a portrait of Shakespeare and Queen Elizabeth I, and "The Man of Destiny" concerns a meeting between Napoleon and a mysterious and beautiful woman. The plays have in common the fact that both Shakespeare and Napoleon are portrayed before they have reached their maturity — Napoleon is a twenty six year old in command of the French army during its Italian campaign; and Shakespeare is a young playwright producing comedies, with his greatest works still ahead of him.

Costumes

Althea Douglas is designing the costumes for the two productions. Mrs. Douglas has been costuming English Department productions for several years, and she has also designed costumes for the Montreal Repertory Theatre and in New York.

Performances

"The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" and "The Man of Destiny" will be presented at Moyse Hall on March 7th, 8th, and 9th. Mail orders for reserved seats will be accepted if addressed to Griffith Brewer, Arts Building.

Freedom Fighter Gives First Hand Report To Students Today

A leading Hungarian freedom fighter will address the student body at a public meeting on Wednesday, January 30th, at one o'clock, in the Walter M. Stewart Room of the Union.

Other speakers on the panel will be Mr. W. A. McFaul, Eastern Division Superintendent of the Department of Immigration, and Mr. C. Keglevich of the Hungarian Relief Fund. Professor R. C. Pratt of the McGill Department of Political Science will be the chairman of the meeting. The name of the freedom fighter cannot be released for security reasons.

History Of Revolt

The press and radio coverage of the Hungarian uprising was not entirely adequate and frequently gave rise to confusion. This is the first opportunity for McGill students to hear an accurate account of the revolt directly from one who has played an important role in it. The other speakers will give brief outlines of the historical background of the revolt and of its consequences from the Canadian point of view.

The meeting is sponsored by the McGill Canadian-European Society.

25% Macdonald Students Become Xmas Graduates

by RON CAPLAN

Three freshmen and thirteen sophomores have fallen by the wayside as a result of midyear examinations in agriculture at Macdonald College. The failures in second year represent almost 25% of the sophomore class of 55 students.

Dean Dion, of the Faculty of Agriculture, said when interviewed that the number of students cut was not unusual. He stated that in the first two years of the course about 50% of the registered students generally drop out. Roughly one-half of these leave the College voluntarily, the other half are those who have failed to attain the required academic standing.

The high percentage of second year failures as contrasted with the relative success of the freshman class is a problem, said Dean Dion. The main reasons for the situation, however, are quite clear. "In their first year," he said, "we make them work." First year courses are largely designed to assist in the transition from high school to college.

Extracurricular activities and the lure of campus life prove to be the downfall of many sophomores who are no longer subject to strict control. The "relative immaturity" of students at the College, said the Dean, is another factor contributing to the number of failures.

"The primary object of a university is not to see that every student gets a degree," the Dean emphasized. "It would be very easy to impose a system whereby a great majority of students would graduate," he stated, "but we must leave something to personal initiative, or our graduates will not be of the same calibre."

However, ways to decrease the number of failures have been sought. A student advisory system has been instituted, stated the Dean. Undergraduates are required to see an advisor a minimum of once a month.

Only four students, all, freshmen, have failed in the Christmas examinations in the School of Household Science. They will be readmitted next fall, however, providing they reapply.

PROFESSOR RECEIVES AWARD

Professor C.U. Christie of the Department of Electrical Engineering received eminent recognition in his field on Tuesday when he was accorded honorary membership in the Canadian Electrical Association. He is the third person to be so honoured in the history of the Association.

The ceremony was on the occasion of the Association's Eastern Zone Convention in Quebec City and the citation was read by CEA President A.T. Abbott of Montreal. Dr. Christie was chairman of the Eastern division of the CEA from 1926 to 1942.

Nominations Now Open For Carnival Queen

Nominations are now open for Carnival Queen. This was announced yesterday by the Queens Committee, which is responsible for the arrangements pertaining to the nominations for Carnival Queen, the judging for the five finalists, the personal appearances which the candidates make on campus, and the voting for Carnival Queen, who will be crowned at Forum Night.

Regulations are as follows:

- 1) Candidates must be single.
- 2) Candidates must be regular undergraduates and in good standing with the university.
- 3) Girls who are in first year or who previously have been one of the finalists are ineligible.

Nominations

Nominations must be signed by twenty-five students, either male or female, in any faculty or year, as well as by the nominee herself. All nominations are to be handed into George at the Tuck Shop.

The Queens Tea will be held Friday, Feb. 8. At the Tea, the nominees will be interviewed by a board of five judges on beauty, charm, poise, and personality. After the five finalists have been chosen, they will be responsible for campaign posters. The week before the Carnival will be spent making appearances in all the particularly large classes, where each candidate will be introduced to the students. The candidates will also make various publicity appearances on radio and television, as well as in several residences on campus.

The climax will be reached when campus-wide voting takes place on Wednesday, Feb. 20. The results will be kept secret until Friday night, Feb. 22, Forum Night, when one of the five finalists will be crowned 1957 McGill Winter Carnival Queen.

Dr. Orvig Talks on Arctic Weather

Dr. Svenn Orvig spoke last night to twenty-five members of the Franklin Society on "Arctic Weather Around McGill". Dr. Orvig reviewed the type of research work that has been going on in the Arctic. As research associate at McGill, Dr. Orvig related the progress that the Arctic Institute of North America, founded in 1945, is making.

McGill University is the seat of Arctic Research in Canada. At the present time the Departments of Zoology and Physics are doing research on ice and snow. Dr. Marshall, of the Physics Department, started the Stormy Weather Group which studies the phenomenon of hail. A group in the Geography Department is currently employed in amassing data concerning Arctic weather.

Purpose

The main purpose of these research teams is to categorize and record information pertinent to the study of Arctic weather. Dr. Orvig said that Arctic problems are steadily increasing and provide challenge to men to overcome them. Until recently, the Arctic was a region where hardly any observations had been made. Now, however, there are numerous weather stations which report the weather conditions necessary for a successful forecast.

A film was shown depicting a recent expedition to the far north. Refreshments were served at the Union.

Indoor Sports

In Fall and Spring the young people of McGill can be seen strewn all over the campus in various decorative poses, holding hands and gazing soulfully into each others eyes. This lends a touch of romance to the campus, or spoils the view, depending on how you look upon such things. On the authority of a young American co-ed quoted in "Life", this sort of thing is apparently also very good from an educational viewpoint. Explaining a picture showing her with her boy-friend clinched in what looks like a hammer lock or a reverse half-nelson, she states that this method of study — each of them is looking at the same book — is the best way to get work done.

With our cold winter we cannot hope to carry on this sort of nonsense outdoors all year, and so it is encouraging to note that in pursuit of their academic education, some members of McGill have decided to move indoors. A tunnel connects the Arts Building with the Redpath Library. At present it is the scene of an underground movement that reaches its peak at this time of year. Like outcast lovers in a French movie, the men and women of McGill use this Tunnel of Love to carry on the ancient pastime of necking. The pipes of the heating system do not provide the right romantic setting, but most of the couples seem oblivious to this absence of atmosphere. The place is warm, convenient and not too public. Like the young lady in "Life" they feel that this sort of mutual contact, in such intellectual surroundings, helps them with their study.

At present this underground pastime, if a little startling to the casual tunnel user, is not to unsightly and it is nice to know that at a time when so much criticism is being levelled at the library that they at least, in part, provide one feature that caters to the real needs of the students.

Letter To The Editor

Resents 'Daily' Critique

Sir,
The "art critic" of the Daily has failed to give his readers a true appreciation of the exhibition of Quebec Artists. Such sentences as "Now that all the dignitaries and such have finished... are unnecessary in a review of this type. I am more interested in the critic's own view of the exhibition, rather than a revelation that he feels inferior to the swarms of "dignitaries" and "know-it-alls" who have had their say.

Our critic has been so "cautious" — as he valourously admits, that he has said nothing of any value whatsoever. It is impossible to ascertain from his article his sincere feelings about any one of the sixty seven paintings exhibited. Why are some paintings good, and others bad? The critic has obviously not bothered to devote the time or trouble to undertake a thorough examination of the paintings. Was the lighting so bad that he could not fully examine the canvasses of Borduas, Ewen, and Riopelle; or were the "decorations" so subtle as to be appreciated only by the "dignitaries"? Also I consider it a serious oversight that the critic did not condescend to discuss the frames of the pictures.

Morals And Politics

Kissing King Saud's Feet

by PETER REGENSTREIF

The free democracies of the West stand in shocked dismay today at one of the most foolhardy displays in the history of American diplomacy. Saudi Arabia's King Saud ibn Abdul Aziz al Faisal Al Saud who only six months ago was depreciated in most quarters as a rather confused desert chieftain has become the most-sought-after man in the Arab world and the key figure in American plans for what nice people call "stability" in the Middle East.

King Saud is visiting the United States on a state tour. But this is not all. On arrival in Washington, the exalted custodian of the Black Gold will be greeted AT THE AIRPORT by none other than the President of the greatest country in the world. This is an event without precedent. Usually, the best a visiting dignitary will get is a welcome at the steps of the White House — the recent Nehru welcome by President Eisenhower was considered just about the epitome. But this was Nehru, democratically-elected head of a great, teeming sub-continent, a man worthy of this sort of esteem, and such displays were considered in order.

Feudal Ruler

Saud's claim to fame is that he is the feudal ruler of one of the greatest oil producing countries on earth. It appears that this is enough to warrant the scraping and bowing that is going on south of the border on the occasion of the oil-king's visit.

Here, too, is an obvious mistake on the part of the American Intelligence corps. Anyone with only a slight knowledge of the Arab mind knows that kissing their feet will not engender feelings of respect; rather the opposite is closer to the truth. Saud and his cohorts must now have nothing but contempt for the leaders of the United States.

Let us connect the above with the Suez Affair. For one thing, in the Suez aftermath all the Middle East States are suffering from loss of oil revenues. Iraq's revenues are down 75%, Kuwait's by 40% and Saudi Arabia's by approximately one-third. This cuts Saudi where it counts since he is reported to have spent his revenues to the point of overdraft. The Americans fully expect that he will ask (tantamount to demand) aid and undoubtedly he will get it.

Vowed Destruction

Remember, however, that this is the same Saud who has vowed the destruction of Israel which in his estimation is to the Arab world what cancer is to the human body. Let us recall what was the main reason for the Israel break-out a few months ago. Israel attacked her Egyptian arch-enemy for the sole purpose of stopping the persistent and damaging Fedayeen raids and to gain some sort of settlement in the area, once and for all. The entire business has turned out to be a complete flop and with UN demands for Israeli withdrawal, the little state is back to the old status quo ante bellum. And still, the much-desired stability is nowhere near realization. Israel's demand for guarantees before withdrawing have just been countered by a statement in the UN by Henry Cabot Lodge that the UNEF forces will patrol Aquaba if Israel withdraws and thereby protect vital shipping.

A Contradiction

Very clever of Mr. Lodge! Certainly this is no assurance for at almost the same time, Egyptian Deputy Foreign Minister Fattah Hassan said in an interview published in the newspaper Al Masaa that "the United Nations Emergency force will not remain in Egypt after Israel has withdrawn from Egyptian territory."

Arab Build-Up

The Americans are typically "power orientated" in terms of political thought. While claiming to be the Western moral force all they have succeeded in doing is to build up the same trouble-makers who have been the bane of any attempts at stability in the area. They are trying to fill the "vacuum" created by British departure but this is not going through the UN as promised. Perhaps they will be successful in winning over the Arab nations but they can't pull the wool of morality over the eyes of the "au courant." Unfortunately, too, we cannot just look on as innocent bystanders, for the fortunes of the West are inextricably intertwined with those of the U.S. Whatever the future has in store, one thing must be said. However governed by political exigencies, the action of New York's Mayor Wagner in this Saud fiasco can only be commended.

TOUGH LUCK

After watching last Monday night's hockey game between the Redmen and the University of Montreal we have come to the conclusion that this just ain't our year. The Redmen puckchasers seem to be following in the footsteps of their football brothers as they dropped another heartbreaker to the Carabins by a 6-4 count. Since the last goal was scored into an empty net, we may for all intents and purposes say that the locals dropped the tilt by a one goal margin.

That was the second league game which the Redmen have lost by only two goals. For those with short memories, the football team had as much luck as they lost games by one, two, three and five points. This epidemic of losing by the closest of margins seems to be catching as the basketball team also lost their latest encounter by a mere five points.

Perhaps the Senior coaches, Messrs. Sullivan, Robillard and Anderson should adopt one of the song hits from the current Broadway musical favourite "My Fair Lady" as their theme song. The song we are thinking of goes under the rather appropriate title of "With a Little Bit of Luck". Yes, with just a little bit of luck the Redmen might have been Intercollegiate football champs, and with a slight smile from Dame Luck herself the Red and White sextet could be sitting atop the Intercollegiate hockey standings.

But it seems that both Lady Luck and Fate have been giving McGill the proverbial cold shoulder all year with the result that both football and hockey teams find themselves in third spot. The only ray of hope stems from the fact that the hockey men still have a chance to make headway in the collegiate circuit.

GUEVREMONT HOT

In the hockey tussle at the MWS two days ago, the Redmen ran into the same sort of trouble which the Varsity Blues encountered when they met the Carabins last Friday. Stumbling block number one was Cy Guevremont, agile Montreal netminder. In both games the Carabins were outshot and outplayed by a wide margin, but Guevremont held the fort time and time again as both the Blues, Friday, and the Redmen, Monday, threw everything at the goaltender in an effort to pull the game out of the fire.

Stumbling block number two is what the players themselves call "puck luck". As Redmen coach Rocky Robillard said after the game, "The puck just wasn't rolling for us." In particular we recalled one play that could have meant the game in regulation time. Dick Baltzan set up Ross Hughes with a perfect pass in the clear, but the puck hit something on the ice (no doubt one of the spectators threw it there) and bounced over Hughes' stick.

The overtime game was the first that the McGill team has participated in in some five years. If memory serves us correctly, the last time that the Redmen had to go into extra time to decide a game was sometime in the 1952-53 season when the locals played their home games at the Forum (remember those days). That game was against Toronto and the Red and White came out second best in that affair too. The fellow that scored the winning goal was John Adams and he got a hat trick that night. As a matter of coincidence, Gaston Dionne's winning goal Monday was his third of the game.

ALLMAND PLAYING WELL

Warren 'King' Allmand, a bespectacled 24 year old left winger with the Redmen, who doesn't usually make the headlines, played another terrific game for the locals. Warren especially has shone in a defensive role for the tribe this season and has looked very good killing off penalties. When it comes to offensive work though, Warren is another of those plagued with bad luck. He is constantly digging the puck out of corners, from back of the net and leading rushes into enemy territory. But when it comes to picking up scoring points, Allmand invariably is left in the cold.

If one of his linemates scores, then the puck has usually hit a defencing player and the assists are washed out, or else Warren is the fourth man at handling the puck. When Warren is shooting at opposing netminders, they consistently make their best saves on his shots as was witnessed Monday when Cy Guevremont robbed him on a hard shot to the corner. If records were kept, they would probably show that he leads the team in hitting the goalposts every year. In one practice session this year after he had hit the post from 20 feet out, we jokingly told him he couldn't do it again if he tried. Then Warren picked up the puck circled in front and bounced it off the post again. He performed this feat twice more and then quit, saying that he didn't want to lose his touch.

The sad fact is that Warren, in a couple of dozen games spread over a three year period, has failed to score a single goal. Len Sigurdson, Redmen defenceman, has come up with a "sure cure" for Allmand's bad luck around the nets, and Warren is thinking the idea over. But as far as we're concerned, as long as Warren keeps playing the hockey he's playing now, he's bound to hit the score sheet. As someone once said, "They can't keep a good man down." Warren is called "King" by his teammates for a reason that can't be told just yet, but keep your eye on the sports pages and number eleven of the Redmen come Winter Carnival time for the true story.

Konyk Leads Baltzan In McGill Scoring Race

According to statistics released late last night by the MDHWA, Leo 'the Cannon' Konyk finds himself leading the list of Redmen scorers to date. These figures do not include exhibition games which, when taken into consideration, find Ross Hughes topping the tribe marksmen.

Konyk, who picked up a goal and an assist on Monday night when the Redmen were topped by the U. of M. Carabins 6-4, has blinked the red light three times while helping to set up his mates on seven other scoring plays. Right behind Konyk is Dick Baltzan who pivots the Redmen's number one attacking unit. The 'old smoothie' has garnered the same number of goals as Konyk, but has been credited with one less assist.

Leading goal scorer on the squad with four is Ross Hughes whose two nifty markers on Monday night helped keep his team in contention during the game. The only other two players with more than one tally in league games thus far are Keith Lawes with three and Jimmy Grant who picked up his two in a winning cause almost two weeks ago at the MWS.

Putting results of league and exhibition games together, we see that Ross Hughes tops the list with 20 points, while Baltzan has 10 and Konyk 18. Leading the parade to the sinbin in league contests are Len Sigurdson and Doug Maule.

Badminton Title At Stake Friday

On Thursday at 3.30 pm. McGill's Badminton Team will entrain for Toronto in an attempt to snare the Intercollegiate Title from the University of Toronto, holders of the title for the past few years.

The following players represent the best team McGill has had for the past three years and much is expected of them. They are:

Bill Bonney (Capt.),
Colin Irving,
Keith Bernard and John Fletcher.

Women's Sports

ICE HOCKEY

On Friday night, Phys. Ed. beat Physio by the score of 3-1. B. Alexander scored a hat trick for the winning team while M. Jardine tallied the lone goal for the losers.

The standings show Phys. Ed. tied with Physio for first place. Arts and Science have defaulted. The same two clubs will meet tomorrow between 5:00 and 6:00 pm. The MacDonald game will be held on Feb. 6.

SQUASH

The Women's Intramural Squash Tournament will be held today at 7:30 pm. Please sign your name to the R.V.C. notice board before 7:15 pm.

VOLLEYBALL

BASKETBALL

There will be an Intercollegiate basketball team practice today from 5:00 to 6:00 pm.

each with 15 minutes, and goaler Michel Joyal with 14, including a misconduct.

I.F.C. DEBATE FEATURED TODAY

The second of the Debating Union's new "On Campus" debates will take place at 1 p.m. today in the Ballroom. This week's bill consists of two teams from the Interfraternity Debates series, both winners of their first-round clash, who will be debating the same subject they had then. Phil Belitsky and Phil De Zwirk from Phi Epsilon Pi will support the resolution, "That the I.F.C. should be independent of the control of the University" against the attack of Burke Doran and Peter Darling of the Kappa Alphas.

Perhaps more important to most students is the fact that Box lunches will be supplied at bargain prices by the Debating Union. This means no more waiting in line for lunch, and from now on the audience at the "On Campus" debates will be able to stuff themselves in a leisurely fashion while listening to some of the best speakers at McGill.

Wilson Southam, President of the Debating Union, will be in the chair. The result of the debate will be decided by a house vote.

Jacob Siskind Will Commentate On Recordings

Jacob Siskind, music critic and former Features Editor of the McGill Daily, will be the guest commentator at the recorded Music Appreciation lecture tonight at the Mechanics Institute. The lecture on this occasion will concern itself more particularly with a history of recording than the music itself. The selections will consist largely of familiar music, but in unusual or rarely heard performances.

Several Mozart arias sung by stars of the Golden Age of Opera will be presented and Florence Foster Jenkins will be heard in her justly famous rendering of the Queen of the Night Aria. The one unfamiliar bit of music will be the Concerto for Two Violins by the Danish composer Lumbye. As an example of the latest in High-Fidelity recording the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch will be heard playing the Ravel Rhapsodie Espagnol.

The lecture is open to the public and the Mechanics Institute is located at the corner of Tupper and Atwater Avenues, one block south of St. Catherine Street.
